Local Construction Company Donates Services

Denver, CO -- April 25, 2005 -- dcb Construction Company, Inc., a locally owned and operated construction company since 1960, announced today its plans to offer community assistance to Shiloh Home, Inc. via the construction and renovation of their new "North Campus Recreational Hall." Construction begins April 25th and is scheduled for completion May 31st.

Shiloh Home, Inc., founded in 1985 and headquartered in Littleton, Colorado, offers planned, individual therapeutic intervention for at-risk youth via residential care, educational programming, day treatment services and outpatient services. A staff of 110 provide a nurturing, therapeutic and educational environment to youth impacted by abuse, neglect and trauma. It is through guidance, clinical intervention and advocacy that Shiloh Home strives to meet the needs of the individual while respecting the diversity of youth and families.

"dcb is a company built on relationships and a strong commitment to the community in which we live and work," commented Barry Sherman, Vice President and Principal. "We are honored to have the opportunity to assist an organization that has such a rich history of community and giving," Sherman concluded.

A Colorado builder since 1960 and generating over $30 million in revenue annually, dcb Construction Company, Inc. is ranked one of Colorado's premier top ten design-build firms by Colorado Construction Magazine, 2004. This local construction company is celebrating its 45th anniversary of providing design-build construction services throughout the state of Colorado.
