Colorado Construction Company Receives Top Ranking

Denver, CO -- April 13, 2006 -- dcb Construction Company, Inc., (dcb) a locally owned and operated construction company since 1960, has been ranked the fifth largest design-build firm in the state of Colorado by McGraw Hill Companies' Colorado Construction Magazine, April 2006. For the past two decades dcb has remained one of the leading design-build general contractors in the Rocky Mountain region and continues to be a pioneer of design-build construction.

dcb began concentrating on design-build project in the early 1980s. "This philosophy of better serving the client's interests with designer and contractor working together has garnered tremendous success for us," said John R. Barna, Jr., President / Principal, dcb Construction Company, Inc. "This core belief of working together is at the heart of the design-build philosophy and a proven method of construction that is now being embraced by the entire construction industry," Barna added.

The design-build method of construction has many advantages, but its essence is the idea that the interest of the owner is best served when the designer and contractor collaborate. Teamwork between owner, designer and contractor can streamline the design construction process and can provide important data early on so that the owner can make informed decisions about the project before a substantial financial commitment is made.

"dcb is organized to provide the very best services associated with the design and build method of project delivery. Our fully staffed in-house design department works directly with other construction, estimating and management personnel to provide a single source of performance and responsibility," Barna concluded.

Since the company's inception in 1960, dcb has completed over 1,500 projects and is currently celebrating 46 years in business. In addition to design-build, services include negotiated, design-assist and select bid.
